Singer Ana Tijoux’s Roja y Negro (Red and Black) Opens the evening

Saturday, October 27, 2018 at 8:00pm

(Los Angeles, September xx, 2018) Sergio Mendes, “the man who put go-go boots on Brazilian music and brought it to the world,” (Billboard) will make a rare Los Angeles appearance when he brings his vivacious bossa nova to The Soraya on Saturday evening, October 27 at 8:00pm. A giant in his genre, Mendes has recorded more than 35 albums over a nearly six-decade career thus far. Joining him to open the evening will be French-Chilean singer Ana Tijoux who debuts her new project, Roja y Negro, new album of acoustic guitar celebrating Latin American folk music. With Mendes and Tijoux on stage, two generations of Latin American artists will share their passion both for traditional and popular music.

“Both Sergio Mendes and Ana Tijoux have incredible backgrounds which speak directly through their music,” said The Soraya’s Executive Director, Thor Steingraber. “Ana Tijoux’s family was exiled from Chile and moved to France to escape a military regime. Sergio Mendes was performing in his teens and by 21 he was touring the world and had already played Carnegie Hall. Both of these artists have music that transcends physical and musical borders, which makes this double-header an important performance in our ‘Music Knows No Borders’ Series.”

Mendes is a music legend and one of the prime architects of the bossa nova revolution of the 1960s. Pianist, composer and triple GRAMMY winner Sérgio Mendes first made an impact in collaboration with Antônio Carlos Jobim and Cannonball Adderley, and came to international stardom with his iconic band Brasil ‘66. Mendes jettisoned thoughts of a classical career when the distinctive jazz-meets-samba fusion called bossa nova began to evolve in the clubs of Rio in the late 50s.

Following a string of largely instrumental bossa albums, Sergio Mendes signed with music giant Herb Alpert’s A&M Records label, adding vocalists singing in English and Portuguese and mixing Brazilian songs with ultra-hip arrangements of contemporary pop tunes. His 1966 debut for A&M, Herb Alpert Presents Sérgio Mendes & Brasil ’66, cracked the top 10 on the Billboard pop charts and included a bona fide hit single with its effervescent take on Jorge Ben’s “Mas Que Nada.” Over the following five decades, the endlessly prolific Mendes recorded 40 albums and has remained a timelessly vital artist, collaborating with a who’s-who of pop music, world music, and jazz, including Stevie Wonder, Dave Grusin, Dori Caymmi, Gerry Mulligan, will.i.am, Erykah Badu, John Legend, and Justin Timberlake. In 2012, Mendes received an Academy Award nomination for Best Original Song in recognition of his contribution to the soundtrack of the animated film Rio.

Ana Tijoux will be performing songs from her new project, Roja y Negro, in which she is joined by jazz musicians Raimundo Santander and Ramiro Durán. Their first single, Tinta Roja, features Mexican American singer Lila Downs. Tijoux explains, “From my earliest years, I took inspiration for my lyrics from singer-songwriters such as Chico Buarque, Violeta Parra, Victor Jara, Mercedes Sosa – revolutionaries with an acoustic guitar, who to me are not so different from my hip-hop heroes. Lila, to me, has followed in that line of greats.”
